

Breezeline Extends Fiber Internet to Homes in Centreville, Maryland

The U.S. internet provider deploys high-capacity FTTH technology

QUINCY, Mass., - June 18, 2024 – Breezeline, a leading internet service, TV and phone provider in the U.S., has extended its fiber facilities to previously unserved homes in Centreville in Queen Anne’s County, Maryland.

The 20-mile fiber expansion initiative is being funded through a grant from the Maryland Office of Statewide Broadband’s “Connect Maryland” program, with additional contributions from Breezeline and the County. Under the Connect Maryland program, grants made to internet service providers cover 70% to 90% of the capital construction costs associated with providing service to unserved areas.

Through the expansion, residents will have access for the first time to Gigabit-speed internet via Fiber-to-the-Home (FTTH) technology. The FTTH technology provides a powerful online experience for users because of its high-capacity bandwidth, reliability, and exceptional download and upload speeds, which is ideal for data-intensive applications, including video conferencing, high definition video streaming, and uploading large files.

“We are pleased to bring our cutting-edge fiber technology to the previously unserved areas of Tilghman Neck in partnership with Queen Anne’s County and the Maryland Office of Statewide Broadband,” said Sean Brushett, vice president of customer and technical operations for Breezeline. “Our goal is to provide our customers with the fastest and most reliable internet service, 24/7/365 support, and a range of innovative services to deliver a great connected experience.”

Breezeline will offer a full suite of innovative services:
